Baking classes at Brasserie Bread

This winter Brasserie Bread is implementing its School Holiday Program, featuring training classes for children and parents alike

Brasserie Bread in Banksmeadow supplies bread to more than 200 hotels, restaurants, delis and cafes. It also offers bread-baking classes for kids on Saturdays as well as special school holiday sessions. After learning to use the traditional artisan methods that Brasserie Bread is known for, children get to eat their creations or take them home.

Among the several child-friendly classes offered during this winter season are Kids' Baking (13-24 July), which instructs children ages 5-16 how to bake their favourite items ($35-$45 for two hours). In its Generation Mix Class, both children and parents take part in a similar two-hour baking lesson, focusing on the creation of pizzas, muffins and chocolate animals ($75 for one parent and one child 5-8 years).

Free Kids' Baking sessions are held on Saturdays at 10am and 12 noon and make great introductory level classes for children above the age of five (reservations are essential).

Lastly, Brasserie offers exciting and entertaining birthday parties

Children get to eat their creations or take them home for ten ($250) or 12 ($300) children aged 5-11. During the one and a half hours (Saturday only) the kids will learn to bake artisan goods and enjoy their treats afterward. It's no mess and no stress for the parents, who can enjoy a beverage in Brasserie's café. Nealey Politano
